Wolfram. 5.0 out of 5 stars I discovered it was so much more than that, all these years later the unit and the remote work just had they did on the very first use. I also have some AE2 headphones which I'm pleased to say perform faultlessly, on the strength of these two products I purchased the Companion multimedia speakers, they were quickly connected to my PC without any problems and yes the sound reproduction is as I would have expected.excellent. They look very good either side of my all in one PC. Cant really find a fault, other reviewers have remarked a LED on off indicator would be a worthwhile addition, I prefer not to have too many illuminations whilst working on the PC and listening to my music, so for me the lack of an operation light suits me fine. I would recommend these speakers, and hope that in many years they perform as well as they do now. Thanks for reading.

So when my previous speakers suddenly and inexplicably died I though Id splash the cash and buy a pair of Bose speakers. I waited to be impressed.They are no better then the Creative Sounds I had before, in fact a little less capable if Im honest.Most annoyingly, theres no light to indicate that the rotary knob on the front has been turned or left on. Overall, sadly overpriced and underdelivering.With the matte black finish it pairs perfectly with highend office peripherals e.g., like your all too expensive monitors. Versus the competition, its a plus not as hipster as Gigaworks or outofplace like Logitech Z600. Sound now this is probably what most people care about. Let me cut straight into it its not as good as I expected. Coming from a Bose Companion 2 Series II like some other reviewers here, the sound appears a bit muffled and unclear upon first plugging into my computer. I can only hope that this will improve over time as they go through the breakingin period.That is something different but these speakers really do deliver in sound if you want to listen to Music on your PC. I always think you get what you pay for and I love these speakers.I will definitely get my money worth from them.I was so pleased with the sound. Then I went away for a couple of weeks. When I came home I turned them on nothing, not a sound, silence. My son came to look in case I was doing something wrong. No, I wasnt. He went and bought me a new power pack. He plugged it in and the light came on. It didnt stay on. As soon as I turned the speakers on the light went off. These speakers I was so chuffed with had blown two power packs. I would have sent them back but when I moved house before Christmas I had thrown all my packaging away. No box to return them. I have bought myself a very cheap set of speakers just to see if there is any other reason for my Bose speakers not to work. No, these work fine. The sound is not anywhere near as good, but they work. Really disappointed.
